MAP IS COMING

MAP Testing

Your child's MAP results are measured using a RIT scale. The RIT is an equal-interval measure that works independent of grade level. As a result, we can measure growth in learning over time. The MAP assessments assist teachers in determining where to focus attention for your child's learning based on his or her readiness. MAP testing is dynamic, posing questions for your child determined by the accuracy of his or her response to the previous question. Results are not reported based on the percentage correct, however, the test is designed to measure instructional readiness. MAP is one of many measures that your child's teacher looks at in determining instructional needs and monitoring your child's growth throughout the school year.
